1. Executive Summary

NOWA jeans is not just a fashion brand, but a company that uses elevated recycled denim to transform it into trendy jeans and jackets. Through their design and materials they aim to create clothing that last, in order to not be wasted.

The company operates on a sustainable business model focused on minimizing waste and promoting environmental responsibility in the fashion industry. This model involves recycling and remanufacturing loops, using materials that would otherwise be considered waste. They aim to move away from the traditional linear and inefficient textile scheme by developing business models that promote the use of higher-quality clothes, subscription services, apparel leasing, and peer-to-peer sharing.

The company operates within various resource circles simultaneously, such as setting up return schemes where consumers receive discounts for returning old jeans, which are then cleaned, repaired, and sold as secondhand or recycled if unusable. Additionally, they offer rental clothes models to reduce the need for new clothing manufacturing and encourage reuse without altering the original design of apparel through online platforms for swapping items. This approach ensures a more sustainable and environmentally friendly fashion model.

The Unique Selling Proposition (USP) of Nowa lies in its commitment to sustainability and environmental responsibility. The brand focuses on transforming waste materials into fashionable products. The company is distinguished by its environmental consciousness and by the embracement of the “No waste” philosophy.

The fashion company targets primarily women and eco-conscious consumers who are looking for stylish and sustainable jeans, they are typically millennials and Gen X. These targets are easily influenced by fashion trends, but they don’t settle for poor quality and fast-fashion brands. Indeed they fight for opting through brands that can ensure them to make the right choice for themselves and the environment.

These consumers value clothing with higher fabric quality, fit and comfort, and also price, since even if they regularly have a larger budget, they do not buy clothing with prices much higher than average. Therefore, the target audience of NOWA Jeans is both the more financially advantaged part of the middle class and also the affluent people, given the price range of its products (over 110 euros for jeans).
Indeed, Nowa is able to position itself as a competitive and reliable option, in line with the social influences, the ethical considerations, and the convenience.

Regarding the future financial projections, it is still not possible to quantify the company expansion, but even if Nowa jeans is a small company they are in continuous growth, and they are able to make a positive impact on the world.

Their focus is on sustainability and the image of this commitment is its Big Wheel of Recycling, in which they show how they upcycle the materials into great products.

2. Company Description

NOWA Jeans is a sustainable fashion brand founded in 2020 in Porto, Portugal. They are on a mission to create stylish and comfortable jeans with minimal environmental impact. They achieve this by using recycled denim, reducing water consumption in their production process, and avoiding pre-consumer and post-consumer waste.

The company's approach involves using recycled fabrics certified by GRS (Global Recycled Standard) to create their products, ensuring verified recycled content and adhering to social and environmental criteria. Indeed, Nowa Jeans implements a circular production process that significantly reduces water usage by 97% compared to normal production methods and eliminates the use of chemicals entirely. By working with limited production capsules and designing products to avoid pre-consumed waste, the brand aims to address the issue of textile waste in fashion.

2.1 Structure

Nowa Jeans operates under the legal structure of a limited liability company. On top of the organization stands the CEO, who also bears overall responsibility for the strategic direction and growth of NOWA. Alongside his management team, he sets the long-term goals for the company. At NOWA, this role is held by Alexandre Nardin (Co-Founder & CEO at NOWA Jeans) with Lucas Vellinho Nardin as the Co-Founder.

The creative essence of NOWA lies within its design department, led by an experienced manager. This department constantly strives to introduce current trends and, above all, innovations to the market. The collections must resonate with NOWA's target audience.
However, determining the target audience for the collections also depends on the management department, as considerations regarding pricing for different age groups must be taken into account. Management can be further divided into the production and procurement departments (The Rise of Casualwear in the Workplace, 2019).
Staying competitive is essential for establishing oneself in the already saturated industry. Close collaboration with suppliers is necessary to avoid the risk of not being able to procure materials on time.

The question of marketing is addressed by another team, overseen by the Marketing and Sales Manager. Whether NOWA is publicized through social media or through creative innovations within the stores depends on them.

A Finance Manager is responsible for budgeting, financial planning, and reporting. The goal is to efficiently utilize financial resources to maximize the company's profitability.
An indispensable part of any company is the HR department. NOWA's HR department manages the recruitment, training, and development of employees.

3. Market Analysis

3.1 Emerging Global Trends

Shift toward sustainability: Consumers are becoming more environmentally conscious, upcycling is gaining popularity, comfort is a priority in fashion, and social media influences trends. Eco-conscious consumers are driving a change in fashion. People care more about the environment and ethics behind their clothes, leading to a rise in eco-friendly options like organic cotton, recycled materials, and slow fashion brands that prioritize responsible production (Essential: Integrating Sustainability in Fashion Retail, 2023).

Upcycling: Upcycling involves transforming pre-existing garments or materials into new and unique pieces of clothing or accessories. This can be done through various methods like cutting, stitching, adding embellishments, or combining different pieces to create a new design. Upcycling is trending due to environmental concerns by reducing textile waste and the environmental impact of traditional clothing production. Upcycled pieces are often one-of-a-kind, catering to consumers seeking individuality and personal expression. Nowa has elevated recycled denim and turned them into comfortable, trendy and cool jeans and jackets (Sustainable Fashion, n.d).

Blurring Lines Between Work and Leisure: The traditional boundaries between work and leisure attire are breaking down. Consumers are increasingly opting for comfortable and versatile clothing that can be worn in various settings, such as athleisure or business casual attire. Nowa caters to this as they offer a variety of options - from loose to, belt jeans, comfy pockets, flare, wide legs and many more comfortable and pretty options

Influence of Social Media: Social media platforms like Instagram and TikTok are playing a major role in shaping consumer fashion trends. Influencers and celebrities are used by brands to promote new styles and products, and consumers are increasingly using these platforms to discover new trends and share their own personal style. Although Nowa is already present on instagram - their reach is not as big compared to other clothing brands. Their tiktok reach is currently at 4 with a low impression of at least 12 to 2k per post.

3.2 Consumer Preferences

Value for money is paramount, today's consumers are looking for high-quality jeans that are affordable and offer good value. They expect durability and performance without breaking the bank.

Ethical and environmental practices are essential. Consumers are increasingly concerned about the environmental and social impact of the clothing they purchase. They seek brands that are transparent about their production practices and committed to sustainable and ethical sourcing.

A strong, relatable brand identity resonates. Consumers are drawn to brands with authentic and compelling stories that they can connect with. A clear brand identity that reflects shared values and resonates with the target audience is crucial for building brand loyalty.

Diverse and inclusive sizing and styles broaden appeal. Consumers today expect a wider range of sizing options and styles to cater to different body types and preferences. Offering inclusive sizing allows brands to reach a broader audience and create a more welcoming and diverse brand image.

3.3 Demographic insights

NOWA caters to women, offering a diverse range of denim apparel including jeans, jackets and skirts. This gender-inclusive approach allows NOWA to capture a broader market and appeal to a wider range of consumers.

Primarily the brand targets young adults and millennials aged between 18-45 years. This demographic segment is characterized by its fashion-conscious nature, seeking trendy yet affordable apparel options.

NOWA´s target demographic typically resides in urban or suburban areas, where fashion trends are closely followed and there is easy access to retail outlets or online shopping platforms. They lead active lifestyles and value clothing that provides both style and comfort, making denim a staple in their wardrobes.

While NOWA´s pricing is competitive, it appeals to consumers across various income levels. The brand´s affordability compared to high-end designer labels makes it accessible to a wider audience, including young professionals and even students.

3.4 Market Segmentation

NOWA targets both domestic and international markets, with a focus on regions known for their fashion-conscious consumer base. Major metropolitan areas in North America, Europe, and parts of Asia serve as key markets for the brand.

NOWA appeals to individuals who prioritize self-expression through fashion. These consumers are trend-conscious, seeking apparel that reflects their personal style and allows them to make a statement. By offering trendy designs and diverse denim options, NOWA caters to this psychographic segment effectively.

The brand targets consumers who value both quality and affordability in their clothing purchases. By offering well-crafted denim products at competitive price points, NOWA caters to individuals who seek value for their money without compromising on style. Additionally, the brand's emphasis on sustainability may appeal to environmentally conscious consumers who prioritize ethically sourced and produced apparel.

NOWA's product line includes a variety of denim apparel suitable for different occasions, ranging from casual everyday wear to more formal settings. By offering versatility in its designs, NOWA caters to consumers seeking denim options for various social settings and events.

3.5 Competitive Landscape

NOWA Jeans has a competitive landscape of international established Denim Brands.

In terms of strengths, Levi's, Wrangler, and Lee boast a long history and strong brand recognition. This established reputation translates to consumer trust and loyalty, giving them a significant advantage in the market.
These established brands have built extensive distribution networks with retailers worldwide. This ensures their products reach a vast audience, offering broad market access and potential for high sales volume.
Due to their large-scale production capabilities, these brands benefit from economies of scale. This translates to potentially lower production costs, allowing them to offer competitive pricing and potentially higher profit margins.

In terms of weaknesses, the large size and established processes of these brands can make them less agile. This can hamper their ability to adapt quickly to new trends and consumer preferences, which can put them at a disadvantage in a fast-moving fashion sector.
Sustainability is becoming increasingly important to consumers and established brands may be perceived as lagging behind in this area. This can have a negative impact on the brand's image and lead to a loss of customers.

These brands tend to offer a standard range of styles and sizes, which can limit their appeal to consumers looking for unique or personalized options. This can limit their reach to a wider audience.

In addition, NOWA Jeans also has Portuguese competitors such as Salsa Jeans, leading Portuguese denim brand with a global presence, known for its high-quality materials and innovative designs.
Nudie Jeans, a Swedish brand with a strong focus on sustainability and ethical practices, also has a presence in Portugal.
Manifesto and Oficina de Alma, both Portuguese brands, the first offering premium denim with a focus on comfort and fit, the second known for its unique and handcrafted denim pieces.

In terms of Direct-to-Consumer (D2C) Brands, NOWA Jeans can also draw inspiration from them in terms of how they work with lean structures, enabling them to react quickly to new trends and introduce unique products to the market. This agility gives them a significant advantage in the fashion sector, where consumer preferences can change rapidly.
Direct communication with consumers allows D2C brands to develop a more personal and relatable brand story. This narrative can create a stronger emotional connection with the target audience, fostering brand loyalty and advocacy.
Many D2C brands offer a seamless shopping experience by integrating online and offline channels. This allows customers to browse and purchase products online and potentially return or exchange them in physical outlets, offering greater convenience and flexibility.

On the other hand, there are a few weak points, such as building brand recognition and trust can be a significant challenge for new D2C brands. Established players often have a head start in this area, making it difficult for new entrants to establish themselves in the market.
D2C brands may have lower marketing and production budgets than their established competitors. This can limit their ability to reach a wider audience through traditional advertising channels or to invest in high quality materials and production processes.
As D2C brands grow, effective inventory and logistics management can become complex. Accurately forecasting demand and ensuring on-time delivery can be difficult, leading to stock-outs or overstocking, with an impact on customer satisfaction and profitability.

It should also be noted that NOWA Jeans may have other potential competitors in fast-fashion retailers such as Zara, H&M, Bershka, etc., which offer trendy denim at lower price points.
(Allied Market Research, , n.d.; Denim Jeans Market).

4. Marketing and Sales Strategy:

4.1 Target

NOWA's commitment to using recycled materials and also other reasons, especially the high-price range, eventually bring the company to focus partially on consumers who value sustainability. Namely, people that are willing to pay a premium price and adhere to ethical and eco-friendly practices, therefore seeking out sustainable brands.

Of course, despite the focus on sustainability, NOWA doesn't compromise its style. Indeed, their jeans are available in various fit and always offer options to people that maybe don't prioritize sustainability but are appreciated by those who care about well-made and stylish denim.

The marketing message that we think could be the most appropriate according to the company's mission and the characteristics of its target is "Nowa Jeans, look good, feel good, do good".

4.2 Goals

As we explained in the further steps, our marketing strategy is thought with the objective of achieving the following goals:

1. Increase brand awareness and strengthen brand association with sustainability.
2. Create an app that enables to personalize communications, increase visibility, offer a better user experience, improve customer engagement, raise revenue, and offer loyalty programs.
3. Increase the number of people subscribed to the Loyalty programs.

4.3 Marketing Activities

Website and social media:

- Include a feature on the website that allows users to assess the environmental impact of their purchases in comparison to the typical pair of jeans available on the market.
- Put more effort into creating content for Instagram and TikTok in particular (by posting more engaging stories on Instagram to gain followers on TikTok, for example by collaborating with influencers).

- Add the direct shopping feature on Instagram and TikTok, in order to give the customers the opportunity to purchase the garments they see on the social media posts directly that will redirect them to the website/ App to purchase and browse the item.

- Make the website more user-friendly and inclusive by adding more language translation options.

- Online content moderation on social media by replying to comments, feedbacks and messages to increase engagement and further learn about consumer preferences.

- Create a section for returns instead of just showing the email address to contact which saves time for the customers, feels more personalized and encourages customers to interact with the website more.

App:

- Build an app by creating an immersive experience (e.g Nike app) like having a 3D model mannequin/ clothing item where you can pinch the item to zoom in and out and turn the clothing article around etc.

- Loyalty program through the app: download and sign up for having a welcome bonus for the first purchase, get points for signing up for the first time, for adding your birth date etc. Additionally, you can get points through other actions on the app (such as referring friends to the app or gaming…)

- Create a daily game/quiz section in the app where users can earn points for every correct answer. If they accumulate a specific number of points every week they can win prizes (such as discounts, giveaway rewards and coupons). Naturally, the topics of the game must be about sustainability and environment.

- Send messages for personal and special occasions. However, regarding well-known lucrative occasions like Black Friday and Blue Monday, the company should close the website and promote a campaign against the overbuying of products happening during these commercialized festivities. Also, Nowa might just focus on global celebrations regarding the environment, like World Environmental Day (June 5th), World Water Day (March 22nd), Earth Day (April 22nd), World Ocean Day (June 8th) and Global Recycling Day (March 18th). On these occasions, they could make an announcement in advance that money raised on these events would be donated to nonprofit organizations with environmentally friendly purposes. By doing this, Nowa could distinguish itself from its rivals and position as a more sustainable brand compared to the fast fashion companies.

· Alternative payments like BNPL, so that consumers make expensive purchases with peace of mind. Thus, allowing customers to pay with Klarna, PayPal or Scalapay for example.

Offline:

· Increase the “shop in shop” point of sales as this is a considerably cheaper and more effective way of expanding.

. A little Pop-Up shop with a kiosk in Shopping centers (Colombo, Ubbo as example). The interactive LED screen at the kiosk would allow customers to play the above explained games about sustainability and the world of Nowa brand. If they win, they would receive a welcome bonus that they could use toward their first purchase—but only after downloading the Nowa Jeans app, which is represented by a QR Code in the pop-up kiosk. Since Nowa only offers a limited selection and doesn't require a physical location, this concept could make the company well-known to many consumers who usually buy clothing just offline. Additionally, the lack of personnel encourages people to approach the pop-up and become curious about the QR Code, the app and the rest without feeling pressured to accept offers or feeling uncomfortable with the physical employee.

Future recommendations

- Expanding the apparel by including male and kids options.
- Use of Augmented Reality in the app, in order to offer a more immersive and innovative customer experience. Through the use of AR, customers could virtually try on their favorite jeans directly from their sofa.

5. Product Offering:

Here are the two main product categories offered by NOWA Jeans :

Jeans

NOWA Jeans offers a diverse range of fits and styles to cater to various preferences and body types. From classic skinny and slim fits to contemporary balloon, mom, and wide-leg silhouettes, there's something for everyone.

Many of their jeans come in high-waisted styles, offering a flattering and comfortable fit. All their jeans are made from recycled denim, minimizing their environmental footprint. NOWA Jeans prioritize quality and ensure their jeans are built to last.

Jackets

They offer a selection of stylish and timeless denim jackets for women. Similar to their jeans, their jackets are also crafted from recycled denim. Made with durability in mind, their jackets are perfect for everyday wear.

Services

NOWA Jeans is dedicated to enhancing customer satisfaction through a range of thoughtful services. With every purchase, customers enjoy the added benefit of free shipping on orders above a specified threshold, ensuring accessibility and affordability. Additionally, their commitment to environmental stewardship is evident in their choice of sustainable packaging, aimed at minimizing waste and reducing their ecological footprint. Furthermore, NOWA Jeans takes pride in its transparent approach to business practices, providing customers with insight into their sourcing and production processes directly on their website. This commitment to transparency fosters trust and accountability, empowering consumers to make informed decisions while supporting a brand that values honesty and integrity.

Suggestions :

NOWA Jeans could become even more attractive on the fashion industry market with a few new innovations. Here are our suggestions :

Use of cutting-edge technologies in garment design. Incorporating advanced textile technologies to improve the comfort, durability and performance of jeans and jackets. For example, incorporating breathable, water-resistant or quick-drying fabrics (like canapa, tencel and recycled polyester) could make garments more versatile and suitable for different environments and lifestyles.

Offer a customisation service where customers can choose their own fabrics, cuts, styles and details to create unique pieces that perfectly match their tastes and body shape. This would allow NOWA Jeans to stand out from the crowd by offering an exclusive, made-to-measure shopping experience.

Upcycled accessories. The customers will have the option to send their old denim to NOWA and in turn they get for free an accessory of their choice. They have multiple options to pick from: tote bags, headbands, bucket hats, caps. From a customer point of view, people are more encouraged to recycle their worn denim, while from the company point of view, Nowa could receive denim material for free, and by giving them back an accessory, can save most of the denim received to recycle it into future products. This will be done via the app and will also be available on the website. To start, this will be implemented for Portugal only and may eventually expand internationally. The customers will be able to pick their options for the upcycled accessories through the website and app.

6. Supply Chain Management:

The Supply Chain Management for the Nowa brand encompasses a series of strategic processes aimed at ensuring an efficient and environmentally friendly supply chain from procurement to product delivery. In close collaboration with sustainable companies closest to the brand, value is placed on eco-friendly practices throughout the entire production chain.

The procurement of raw materials will be sourced from local suppliers who employ sustainable farming methods and adhere to environmental standards. This helps reduce the ecological footprint of products while supporting the local economy.

In the production facilities, sustainable manufacturing techniques and renewable energy sources are employed to minimize energy consumption and reduce CO2 emissions. This enables the production of high-quality products without compromising the environment.

Sustainability is also at the core of warehouse management, where focus is on minimizing waste and utilizing efficient storage techniques. By utilizing renewable packaging materials and optimizing transportation routes, the environmental footprint continues to be minimized.

The efforts to implement sustainable practices extend all the way to delivering products to the customers. This is achieved through the utilization of eco-friendly transportation modes and the integration of emission-reducing delivery options.

7. International Expansion Strategy:

Expanding NOWA jeans internationally will offer amazing opportunities but will require careful planning, especially because NOWA is still small and not very known.

NOWA has to consider the market first and look at what countries are big on sustainability, or at least having a growing interest in sustainability and ethical fashion, because if not, NOWA has nothing to offer internationally that every other jeans brand doesn't already offer. NOWA also has to consider thorough analysis on previous denim consumption and preferences. Taking a further look at the target audience and its demographics, fashion trends and what styles are considered popular and mostly sought out products. Is there a specific material not used in a country that could make customer's avoid purchasing from NOWA etc.

It is important to learn about the country's cultural sensitivity, for instance, if NOWA was to expand into Saudi Arabia or any other muslim country, ripped jeans and skinny jeans would not sell to women which is what most of NOWA's collections consist of. In Paris, for instance, the Parisian women are more inclined to wearing straight-leg denim, which is considered the most classic, or flare denim. Something that is very uncommon is the skinny jeans, this is important for NOWA to note on because they also have a collection of slim and skinny jeans. Climate also plays a role and should be considered as colder countries will require thicker material for the jeans, ripped jeans would not be sought out at this time (Paris Jeans Guide, n.d.).

NOWA would also have to consider economic factors like disposable income, purchasing power and economic stability. Furthermore expanding Nowa internationally requires strategic localization efforts which we will further analyze below. As NOWA is still small, we would initially focus on partnering with existing retailers, besides enhancing their websites and apps for e-commerce.

NOWA could collaborate with peer companies that are not direct competitors but are in the same industry. Companies that are also very big on sustainability. For example collaborating with Vans to create denim sneakers/ shoes. Collaborating with Shoevenir which is a Portuguese shoe brand or even TOMS.

NOWA has to focus on e-commerce which is also an indirect entry strategy that allows for a faster entry with less control. Enhancing their e-commerce presence is essential for their success and growth and would help in their expansion strategy. NOWA is currently present in El Corte Inglés' website and since El Corte Inglés is also physically present in Spain with the largest in terms of the number of its customers in their website, and also ranks 3rd in terms of traffic just below amazon and ali express (Elcorteingles.es Traffic Analytics, Ranking & Audience, n.d.).

They could also use this strategy to later on expand into their own physical stores as they would have an insight on what each country's consumers are mostly seeking. The above could be leveraged to expand physically into Spain first, and in many other countries that El Corte Inglés ships to. If in the future NOWA would like to go physical they could explore opening a small store at malls like Zenia Boulevard in Spain.

NOWA has to ensure their App and website especially, are catering to their global markets. This means they have to ensure their content is translatable into the local language. As it may be tough to cater to every country and language, they could start by including the most popular languages like English, Spanish, Portuguese, Chinese, French etc. Visuals would have to be adapted to be user friendly. Being able to cater globally via e-commerce can be an easier to manage strategy and it is considerably a better option to gather customer information and behavior, and it is easier to personalize content.

Shop-in-shops offer brands a quicker and more affordable way to expand their physical presence compared to opening standalone stores. This is especially attractive after the pandemic, as consumers return to in-person shopping. Lower costs allow retailers to open more shop-in-shops, capitalizing on trends, changing consumer behavior, and brand popularity. They also serve as valuable testing grounds for brands considering new locations or even their first foray into brick-and-mortar retail. Additionally, some shop-in-shops, like those at Target and Ulta Beauty, leverage existing same-day delivery services offered by the host retailer (Stratten, 2021). This is for future recommendations if NOWA decides to start going physical, it can be used to a test before completely opening their own permanent stores.

NOWA has to ensure they develop a smart shipping solution for international orders that balances speed and cost. Strategically locate fulfillment centers in different regions to minimize delivery times and expenses.

To navigate cultural differences and marketing tactics in new markets, collaborate with local agencies or consultants. Their expertise will be invaluable in understanding cultural nuances and best practices. However, don't lose sight of your brand's core identity during this adaptation. Stay transparent about your values and production practices to build trust with international customers. This balance between local relevance and brand authenticity is key to success on the global stage.

8. Sustainability and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR):

NOWA Jeans is a committed brand to the principles of sustainability in every aspect of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) integrated into its business. NOWA Jeans undertakes its commitment with a comprehensive basket of initiatives seeking ethical sourcing, environmental stewardship, and compliance with rigorous labour standards. In addition, they have an engaged community.

Ethical Sourcing Practices:

NOWA Jeans places high value on the ethical sourcing of its materials and hence selects its partners with high ethical standards. This includes the preference of those suppliers who can declare transparency in the sourcing of their materials and those who follow fair labour practices, in its value chain. What is more, NOWA Jeans is in charge of recycling its own used denim in order to make a balance between reducing waste and saving natural resources. This, no doubt, speaks volumes of their environmental sensitivity and responsibility. (NOWA Jeans, n.d.)

Environmental Stewardship:

The environmental stewardship constitutes one of the key tenets in the sustainability agenda of NOWA Jeans. The brand hence continues to remain committed to reducing its ecological footprint through innovative and sustainable best development practices. This includes the creation of eco-friendly and water-reducing processes for dyeing, improvement of energy efficiency in manufacturing, and the transfer to the circular economy model.

NOWA Jeans proves style can be environmentally friendly without compromise and sets an example of sustainability in the fashion world. (Patagonia Outdoor Clothing & Gear, n.d.)

Labor Standards Compliance:

For NOWA Jeans, labour standards are considered as an absolute zero-tolerance issue. Starting from the safe working conditions at the stage of the sourcing of raw materials, the operations go on to the stage of producing the finished product and, in each case, it is decently treated. These are backed up by a zero-tolerance policy for breaches and regular audits against the CSR strategy NOWA Jeans to ensure all engaged individuals throughout the production process are treated at all times with dignity and respect. (MindsetEco, 2024)

Community Engagement Efforts:

The spirit and essence of NOWA Jeans' CSR activities are an intense sense of commitment to community involvement and support. NOWA Jeans gives back to the community through local projects and initiatives by encouraging and supporting minority sustainable projects. It is dedicated to the improvement of the operational transparency of the company, together with its customers and partners, for the development of joint solutions in relation to advancing sustainability. NOWA Jeans seeks with these efforts a self-transformation and to inspire a movement toward greater responsibility in the fashion industry and beyond. (NOWA Jeans, n.d.)

Some above suggestions are not specific to NOWA but this is what we believe NOWA should be or could be following to become more socially responsible.
